Scientific Inquiry into Hydraulic Fracture Stimulation in Western Australia

Call for submissions

On 5 September 2017, the Western Australian Government placed a ban on hydraulic fracture stimulation (fracking) in the Perth Metropolitan, Peel and South West regions, and a moratorium over the rest of the State. An independent scientific inquiry is being undertaken to assess and report on the potential impacts arising from the implementation of hydraulic fracture stimulation on the onshore environment of Western Australia, outside of the Perth metropolitan, Peel and South West regions. The scope

The inquiry is being conducted by a Panel established by the Minister for Environment under section 25 of the Environmental Protection Act 1986 (EPA Act).

The Panel will base its report to Government on credible scientific and historical evidence of impacts, and their potential mitigation through appropriate regulation.

This is a scientific inquiry, and the Panel will consider perspectives, concerns and projections of onshore hydraulic fracture stimulation in Western Australia, within the scope of the Terms of Reference, as well as technical evidence that would inform their consideration. We seek stakeholders and the wider public to assist the inquiry to ensure the Panel has:

- A full and appropriate understanding of the environmental values potentially at risk from unconventional oil and gas developments involving hydraulic fracture stimulation;
- Any data or other evidence that might inform a scientific risk analysis of hydraulic fracture stimulation;
- Any data or other evidence that might inform a social, geographic and geologic, and local conditions from Western Australia;
- Any references or opinions on what a regulatory framework should ideally look like if the Government lifts the current moratorium.

We want to hear from you

- Submissions to the inquiry can be made in the following ways:
 - online by clicking on the 'have your say' tab at: www.environment.wa.gov.au
 - via email to info@environment.wa.gov.au
